

Contents

Preface	9
Foreword	11
Stephen Kemmis
The Distinctive Character of Education	19
Paul Martin Opdal
Education – a practical discipline	20
Educational theory and educational theories	26
References	34
The Organisation of Learning – Experiences from the Project
“A Learning Conscious School Day”	35
Tor Vidar Eilertsen
Introduction	35
The Project	36
Organisational solutions	37
Lessons learned	38
Concluding discussion	47
References	49

From Spark to Learning Flame – Experiences from a Norwegian Action Research Project	51
Tom Tiller
New course determines a new course	51
In the same boat- the significance of joint participation	54
Greater similarities or greater differences?	59
One has to want to row... ..	61
It rhymed in the end	64
References	67
Action Research and School Development in Expanded Learning Environments	69
Torbjørn Lund
Participatory Action Research	70
Critical action research as a supplement to PAR	74
The school project	77
School knowledge and the local context	78
Closing comments	91
References	91
Action Research: Well-Suited to Change and Development of An Education Student’s Attitude?	95
Tove Leming
Introduction	95
Action research in one’s personal field and practice	98
Students and action learning	100
A meeting between cultures and personal prejudices in the daycare center	101
What is improvement and development? The action researcher’s special responsibility	104
Action research in the field of education	106
References	108

The Action Researcher and Sherlock Holmes. Similarities in logical Strategies	111
Cato Bjørndal
The action researcher and Sherlock Holmes: similarities	112
Logical strategies in the search for knowledge	116
The action researcher's context sensitive investigation	129
References	131
Improvisation, Action Learning and Action Research	133
Bjørn Alterhaug
“The thoughtless and reckless practice of music”	135
Meeting a master	137
Planned aimlessness	139
Emergency strategy or first-rate solution?	140
Golden moments and eroticism	141
Mutual consent	143
Body and Soul	145
Kind of Blue	147
Liberate, challenge, reflect and create	149
References	151
The Diver	153
Odd Arne Thunberg
A possible relationship between action learning and scenario learning ...	153
References	168
Ethical Consequences in Action Research	171
Janne Madsen and May Britt Postholm
Action research at Fjellfjord School	172
Usefulness for both practice field and research field	175
Who owns the truth? Who is allowed to think?	177
Is agreement an objective?	179
Anonymity and confidentiality	180
Relations	181
Concluding comments	183
References	183

Emotional Aspects of Action Learning	185
Eli Moksnes Furu
The significance of emotions	185
The classroom as emotional field	188
The study room as emotional field	191
References	201
Power and Resistance, Powerlessness and Action in School	203
Anders Persson
Power and resistance in school	204
Powerlessness and action in school	211
Power, resistance, powerlessness and action learning	215
References	218
Contributors	221